Publish or perish. Suggested systems to accelerate productivity while writing a manuscript

We all recognise that the current academic system is becoming a rat race. Success is often translated to the number of publications an academic has. But how can one get these papers published when the majority of academics have to teach, supervise, write research grants, reply to emails etc etc etc? It is all about creating systems that work for you. In the seminar, I will share with you what systems have worked for me so far and how one can adjust them to their own reality and get that manuscript finally submitted!
